Please indicate which, if any, Generative AI tools you have used and explain how these tools have aided you in your Extended Essay.

For example, for literature search, idea generation, development and debugging of code, and/or for wording and structuring the essay.

I have used Claude, primarily for coding. This use included debugging, evaluating pull requests, and discussing module and function design. For example, I used it extensively to develop the API client I used to fetch my data. I have also used it in a limited scope to find additional sources (e.g., "are there any papers that might discuss idea X") and sanity check smaller details in my text (e.g., 'should I "use" or "uses" in this context: {context}').

Academic Integrity Statement

The Department of Economics is committed to the highest standards of academic integrity in every aspect of academic work. All students and staff are expected to uphold these standards both individually and collectively, and to act honourably in the pursuit of learning, teaching and research. Academic misconduct in all its forms contravenes the values of the LSE, as well as those of the wider academic community.

Plagiarism (passing off as your own the work of others, whether published or not, and including content generated using artificial intelligence) is a serious examination offence and carries with it heavy penalties.

I declare that I have adhered to the Department of Economics Honour Code and that besides properly referenced quotations and in-text citations, the submitted essay is my own work and contains no plagiarism; it has also not been submitted previously for any other assessed unit in this or any other degree course.

I have read and understood the LSE's Regulations on assessment offences: plagiarism: https://info.lse.ac.uk/Staff/Divisions/Academic-Registrars-Division/Teaching-Quality-Assurance-and-Review-Office/Assets/Documents/Calendar/RegulationsAssessmentOffences-Plagiarism.pdf
